Multilingual learners bring a wealth of linguistic and cultural knowledge to our classrooms.

This programme explores how whole-school approaches and responsive classroom practice can remove barriers, develop academic language and ensure every learner can participate confidently and achieve success.

WHY IT MATTERS
Language is central to learning. Research demonstrates that multilingual learners achieve best when teaching deliberately develops academic language alongside curriculum knowledge, enabling pupils to fully participate in classroom learning while valuing the languages they already bring.

YOU WILL EXPLORE:

- Whole-school approaches to multilingual inclusion
- Linguistically responsive classroom practice
- Developing oracy across the curriculum
- Scaffolding language for curriculum access
- Building belonging and participation for every learner
